Although the undertone in cotton yes- points were: terday was rather reactionary, there was no apparent weakness and the recessions from the high level of Monday, amounting to 11 to 14 points, appeared to be largely due to local liquidation, and there was a sharp raily at the close. To the rank and file of the trade 12c. in May appears to be a reasonably high price for new crop months. The optimism of traders who have learned to discount pessimistic advices from the cotton belt no doubt player. vices from the cotton belt no doubt plays a part in the faith that a big production ulti-mately is not out of the question.

Liverpool showed evidence of some profit taking and the opening here was at a small decline from Monday's closing prices. The early weather map showed further rains in Texas, Oklahoma and Arkansas, and the forecast called for further unsettled conditions, with showers over the States west of the Mississippi River. The weather transfer the property of the states west of the mississippi River. weekly weather report was construed as very unfavorable, for it laid stress not only on the cold, wet weather in the Southwest but also upon lack of rain and low temperatures in the Eastern belt. In splie of this, however, the market showed little snap until the late trad-

The hesitation displayed by the market yesterday should not be hastily construed as top heaviness or a sure indication that prices have reached the top. There are always a good many traders who operate on surface conditions and a day or so of clear skies sets them busy unloading and going short. The fundamentals of the present cotton situation appear to be bout as follows: Indicated requirements probably more. The question to be fought out during the summer and until the final count of the bales will be whether that requirement is going to be satisfied by the South this season.

ideal conditions will be maintained throughout the season. Texas has re-ceived a check more severe than it has experienced since the wet season of 1907 when the production fell off 1,800,000 bales from the season previous. If his-tory should repeat itself this year the Texas crop might trove astoundingly small, and this deficit could not be made up by the rest of the belt. The bulls figure that they have the best figure that they have the best of the argument, for they adhere to the idea that even moderately unfavorable conditions will put the market up, while almost perfect conditions maintained throughout the season would not give the bears an extensive decline.
